Environmental Justice

The diagram to the right is a development from the previous one, looking at the demographics of low-income households next to their environments.

What is evident from the water and air pollution data (sourced from the Environment Agency database) along The Old Canal Line is that due to the clean air zone, there is a neglect of the poor residents from Soho Loop and surrounding ladywood/ gib heath area. They still are experiencing higher air pollution and worse water quality.

This kind of environmental injustice is the kind of problem that FirstPort aims to deal with.
